Die Masse erdrückt die beim Einzelnen noch mögliche Einsicht und Überlegung und führt daher zwangsläufig zu doktrinärer und autoritärer Tyrannei, wenn der Rechtsstaat einem Schwächeanfall erliegen sollte.

The mass crushes out the insight and reflection that are still possible with the individual, and this necessarily leads to doctrinaire and authoritarian tyranny if ever the constitutional State should succumb to a fit of weakness.

The Alchemical Mind: Carl Jung, Tibetan Buddhism, and Francisco Varela

Leslie de Galbert, BA, D.E.S.S.

In The Alchemical Mind: Carl Jung, Tibetan Buddhism, and Francisco Varela, Jungian analyst Leslie de Galbert brings a new perspective to the relationship between Jung and Buddhism by introducing the work of Chilean scientist and philosopher Francisco Varela (1946–2001). Jung stressed the importance of remaining faithful to one’s own cultural origins and found that Westerners were too rooted in Cartesian mind-body dualism to be able to experience the nondualism of Eastern contemplative practices. Yet he also posited that the archetypes of the collective unconscious are universal. Can this paradox be resolved?

When His Holiness the Dalai Lama and Francisco Varela co-founded the Mind and Life Institute in 1987, they did so in the belief that interdisciplinary dialogues between Western scientists and Eastern contemplatives might offer new insights into the mind and consciousness. Varela brought not just neurobiology but also his concept of embodied enactive cognition into dialogue with the Buddhist epistemologies of Tibetan monastics.

Galbert shows how analytical psychology resonates deeply with this idea of openness and dialogue as a means to building a bridge between different viewpoints and different cultures. The Alchemical Mind lays down a path where an encounter between analytical psychology, Tibetan Buddhism, and the ideas of Francisco Varela enriches and deepens our understanding of mind.

CELEBRATING PETER AMMANN'S 95th BIRTHDAY!

Federico Fellini: From Personal Story to Mythical Event

16–17 October, 2026

Karl der Grosse

Kirchgasse 14, 8001 Zürich

Filming of Satyricon – Sitting: Federico Fellini; on the far right: Peter Ammann

After graduating from the C.G. Jung-Institute in Zurich, I wished to go into filmmaking. I adored Fellini's films and knew he admired Jung and had been in Jungian analysis. I went to Rome and asked Fellini if he would accept me as an assistant for his next film; he did. However, my encounter with Fellini in 1966 happened at a time when he was in a serious creative crisis during which his dreams guided him away from personal narratives toward more archetypal themes. We will watch two of his films that represent the beginning and the end of this crisis.

Fri, 16 Oct Peter Ammann
13:00–16:45 Lecture with discussion, followed by screening of 8 1/2

Sat, 17 Oct Peter Ammann
13:00–16:45 Lecture with discussion, followed by screening of Satyricon

Following the screening of Satyricon, join us for an Apéro & dinner (self paid) to celebrate Peter Ammann's 95th birthday! Location and exact timing will follow. Please email us at office@isapzurich.com or check the ISAP website for details.

Traumdeutung nach C.G. Jung

- Träume überbringen uns Botschaften, die verstanden werden wollen. Sie reagieren auf Erleben und Gedanken aus dem Wachleben. Sie berichten von Gefühlen, die im Moment nicht wahrgenommen werden. Sie machen uns auf die tiefen Gründe für unser Verhalten aufmerksam.
- Ob bedrückend, verwirrend oder wunderschön, Träume sind eine heilsame und reichhaltige Quelle an Erkenntnissen über uns selbst.
- Die Träume haben ihre eigene Sprache; sie sprechen in Bildern ähnlich wie Märchen, Sagen und Religionen aller Zeiten. Wenn wir ihren Hinweisen und unseren Einfällen dazu nachgehen, werden verborgene Kräfte freigelegt.
- Welche Anregung will mir der Traum geben? Warum gerade jetzt?

My Path to Becoming a Therapist in Analytical Psychology

It all began during my school days when my teacher explained C.G. Jung's concept of the collective unconscious and the origin of dreams. This has fascinated me ever since, just as it intrigues many students of Jungian psychology. We are in a permanent relationship and dialogue with ourselves and our patients.

In these casual talks each semester, ISAP analysts offer glimpses into their personal approaches to Jungian analysis.

Jungian Keynotes Lecture Series

Losing Touch and Gaining Infinite Connection: A Humanist Dreamer at Home and Adrift in a Quantum/Post-Quantum World

In the quantum world, here or there becomes here and there ... and probably elsewhere. The lecture begins to explore how this experience feels familiar to the Jungian dreamer and the analyst on the path of individuation. Rather than say more, I would like participants to imagine what the content of the lecture might be.

Jungian Keynotes Lecture Series

Ecological Issues Unveil the Unlived Soul Life of our Time

The ecological crisis has its roots and solutions in the way we think and act. As our time has lost the soul dimension, key psychological values appear projected concretely onto core themes of today, overcharging them, mostly with destructive ecological effects. The symbolic analysis of ecological problems unveils, in revealing images, the unlived soul of our time and helps to ground our lives again in soul and natural processes, honouring the basic unity between human beings and nature. Analytical Psychology offers crucial resources for the doubly needed ecological and personal-cultural turnaround.

Living on Different Levels with Darkness: Ours and the World's

The heart of the moral and psychological problem we are facing is not intellectual. It requires a new form of humanism according to E. Neumann: human individuals who stop blaming and projecting on the 'other,' human individuals who begin to understand the 'other' is also within me; human individuals who can embrace shadow, darkness, even evil, as essential to vitality and life lived fully.

Jungian Keynotes Lecture Series

The Golem – an Old Prophetic Illustration of the Crisis of our Industrial Consumer Civilisation and its Spirit

Since medieval times, there have been stories about figures made of clay animated by the name of God inscribed on their forehead. Initially these Golems were only symbolic of the power of God, but gradually this power was used for domestic tasks. These Golems easily followed the instructions of their makers, but had the critical feature of permanent growth, thus endangering – with no ill intent – the house and its inhabitants. The last Golem stories show desperate attempts to stop this destructive growth. This myth will allow us to look at our present-day collective civilisational situation.

BodyDreaming in a Time of Conflict

The BodyDreaming approach places embodied regulation at the heart of analytical psychology. In times of war and global unrest it supports alignment with the Jungian Self – the archetype of orientation and meaning. By working directly with the nervous system, the body begins to respond, restoring safety and creating space for what was shut down. Soul is experienced intimately in the cellular resonance of the body. This participatory, ensouled relationship with body and world helps metabolise shock, reduce chronic states of reactivity, and sustain presence, meaning, and connection amid chaos.

The 2,000,000-Microsecond-Old Man

In the industrialised world, our attention spans, both individually and collectively, are becoming ever shorter. I will outline the factors contributing to this relatively recent phenomenon, especially the role of digital media, and link this to Jung's critique of our "monotheism of consciousness." I will then elaborate some of the resulting dangers due to our failure, again individually and collectively, to deal with long-term problems such as extreme wealth inequality, forced migration, climate breakdown and biodiversity loss.

Jungian Keynotes Lecture Series

The Challenge of Too Much Intelligence and Too Little Wisdom – What to Do About It?

This is a lecture with a question-and-answer session.

Jungian Keynotes Lecture Series

The End of Truth and the Birth of Subjectivism

The problem of subjectivism in the discernment of truth has led to wholesale abandonment of truth as a desirable collective project.

And the Bridegroom Was a Bird... “The Feather of Finist, the Bright Falcon”

The short-lived bliss of a young girl is shattered through the malice of her two sisters. Leaving all behind, she sets out on a long and arduous journey in search of her love. This is a Russian fairy tale from Alexander Afanasjev’s collection, a contemporary of the Grimm Brothers.

This course requires extra work between sessions.

Christiana Morgan and her Tower of Dreams

In 1926, Christiana Morgan, inspired by her analysis with Jung, built a tower on a bluff above a river in Massachusetts, and called it the Tower on the Marsh. It became an expression of her individuation process and a spiritual retreat; it can be seen as the American Bollingen. Hilary Morgan, granddaughter of Christiana, will present her 26-minute film “Tower of Dreams,” followed by a PowerPoint presentation about the symbols in the Tower.

10 21 Lecture - Psychopathology & Psychiatry

Introduction to Trauma in the Psyche and the Body: The Psychodynamics and the Latest Discoveries in Neuroscience

The experience of trauma and, in general, extreme overwhelming emotions, is not only psychological but also physical as it profoundly impacts our overall physiology and especially the nervous system and brain. The psychological and physical effects of trauma can persist for years, and remain extremely difficult to treat. To understand why, we will review both psychodynamic discoveries and the latest neuroscience research. In the process we will also study the physiology and biochemistry of the trauma response, looking at the hormonal and nervous systems.

05 23 Lecture - Ethnology & Psychology

Katarzyna Wach, Mgr. Psych., Soc. Psych.

Tuesday

29 September | 13:00–14:45

On-site only at ISAP

A Turning Point – From Profanation to Sacrality, from Control to Reverence, to a Time When Divinity was Embodied

In this lecture, we will journey back into the history of Old Europe and into less “motherless” times of our collective consciousness. We will step into the living myth of the egalitarian goddesses and gods of our ancestors. We will explore archaeological images of swollen and revered vulvas, which were not a source of shame or fear, but a living altar of divinity and sacred sexuality. The lecture honors the work of Marija Gimbutas.

06 24 Lecture - Religion & Psychology

John Desteian, JD, DPsy

Barbara Strahm, Dr. rer. nat.

Friday

2 October | 10:00–11:45

On-site & Live on Zoom

The Psychological Implications of the Biblical Story of the Aqedah

We will present different ontological interpretations of the Biblical story of Abraham and Isaac, but both focusing on the development of a form of consciousness which has evolutionary implications for how human beings relate in the world. Desteian's focus is on the transition from mythic to religious consciousness. Strahm focuses on the evolutionary psychic implications of the transition from hunting wild living animals to breeding animals and then killing them, and on its effects on the development of Jewish and Christian religious perceptions as documented in the Bible.

Federico Fellini: From Personal Story to Mythical Event

After graduating from the C.G. Jung-Institute in Zurich, I wished to go into filmmaking. I adored Fellini's films and knew he admired Jung and had been in analysis. I went to Rome and asked Fellini if he would accept me as an assistant for his next film; he did. However, my encounter with Fellini in 1966 happened at a time when he was in a serious creative crisis during which his dreams guided him away from personal narratives toward more archetypal themes. We will watch two films (on two different days) that represent the beginning and the end of this crisis: 8 1/2 and Satyricon. Each viewing will be introduced by a short lecture and a discussion. Location: Karl der Grosse, Kirchgasse 14, 8001, Zürich.

Vampires in the 21st Century: Unmasking Predatory Parasites in the Collective, Ourselves, and The Spirit of the Times

Lurking in the shadows of our way of life, business as usual, and unconscious drivers of the culture, the archetypal fiend operates under masks of normalcy. In what ways can we identify the phenomenon outside, and also within, ourselves? What is the relationship of the vampire to depth psychology, and how can we recognize how we invite it in, and how we might begin to free ourselves from its possession? The lectures will touch on personal, interpersonal and transpersonal themes, with examples from attitudes and consequences in contemporary society, as well as in case histories.

“God exists! This story is true.”

This is a quote from an African man, who was transported through the storm of a genocide far from his people, his culture, his language and his soul.

I will present here the testimony in a psychiatric practice of an extreme destiny. I will add theoretical reflections on psychodynamics and the function of symbols in psychic trauma. I will also describe transference and countertransference in this extraordinary encounter of two people with very different roots and cultures. Intense suffering can trigger a process of consciousness, which seeks to renew and rebalance life out of the depth of the soul, focusing on reconnection with the self, as well as on confronting the shadow and possibly its reintegration.

07 45 Lecture - Theory of Complexes & the Association Experiment

John O'Brien, PhD

Nada O'Brien, PhD

Friday

30 October | 10:00–11:45

Word Association Experiment in Jungian Coaching Framework

In this lecture we will share our twenty-year experience of using the Word Association Experiment in our Jungian coaching work. We work with individuals, teams and organizations across a variety of industries and professional backgrounds. We will explore how the usage of the Word Association Experiment informs the diagnostic process, the choice of practice methods as well as the teleological perspective.

Pain Explored

Emotional pain signals something is amiss. Our psyche may try to avoid pain with defensive strategies, such as denial, splitting, and shutting down. Suffering that is overwhelming and unacknowledged readily turns into anger and resentment. But cries of pain can also lead to creative expression and healing. We will explore examples of dealing with pain by dissociation, by revenge and retaliation, and by creativity and action evoked by suffering.

02 47 Lecture - Psychology of Dreams

Katharina Casanova, lic. phil.

Thursday

5 November | 15:00–16:45

Hidden Pathways of Germanic Mythology

The lectures take a Jungian look at the Germanic cosmology, the main gods and the end of time. The neglected Germanic female and male archetypes will be addressed, as well as the consequences of cultural repression and mythological illiteracy. How the old Germanic culture created an unrecognized precondition of the modern world will be explained. The concept of cultural ecology will be developed, and I will show how Odin's self-sacrifice on the world tree designates him to become the wounded healer par excellence and an essential god for our times.

Approaching the Art of Three Art Brut Artists

"There is no such thing as art of the mentally ill, just as there is no such thing as art of people with knee problems." said Jean Dubuffet, the founder of Art Brut. We will take a look at the completely different works of three Art Brut artists, all three hospitalized for schizophrenia: Aloïse Corbaz, Adolf Wölfli, and Eugen Gabritchevsky. By delving into their lives, and the reports of their doctors and relatives, as well as their own writings, we gain a better understanding of the worlds each of them created in their art.

When Gods Return as Symptoms: The Great God Pan, Disenchantment, and the Psyche-Nature Split

As Jung observed, the old gods did not disappear under modern scientific scrutiny. They were exiled, only to reappear as pathology and a culture increasingly estranged from the world it inhabits. The ecological crisis is the outer symptom of an inner split. This talk reads the Roman-era "death of the Great God Pan" as a diagnostic myth of modern disenchantment: the split between an archaic psyche embedded in an ensouled nature and a modern psyche that "straightens things up" through logic. The work, then, is to recover the mythic psyche as a guide toward a renewed relation to nature.

Art and the Creative Unconscious: Erich Neumann's Vision

This seminar explores Erich Neumann's vision of art as a transformative force within the collective psyche. We examine the artist as an "archetypal individual" who channels symbols from the unconscious to renew culture. Central to this journey is the Great Mother archetype, representing the primal source of all creation and the birthing of new consciousness. For Neumann, great art transcends personal neurosis, drawing from the universal depths to dismantle old canons and pave the way for the new.

Siberian Shamanism and the Path of Individuation

This seminar explores traditional Siberian shamanic initiation as a powerful metaphor for the Jungian individuation process. We examine how the ritual “dismemberment” of the shaman represents the ego’s dissolution when facing the collective unconscious. By integrating “spirit helpers” – the psychological equivalent of archetypal forces – the initiate bridges the gap between ego and the Self. We discover how this ancient journey from psychic death to rebirth offers a timeless map for achieving psychological wholeness.

o8 64 Lecture - Developmental Psychology

Allan Guggenbühl, Dr. phil.

Surviving Adolescence – The Challenges and Dangers on the Path to Adulthood

Coming of age is a phase in life during which the demeanour, the values and attitudes of the young person change. Parents react bewildered, lost for answers; conventional psychotherapeutic approaches are often not successful. In this lecture, the psychological backgrounds and possible approaches based on archetypal psychology, are presented and discussed.

o6 65 Lecture - Religion & Psychology

Susanna Bucher, Dr. sc. nat. ETH

Thursday

10 December | 13:00–14:45

On-site only at ISAP

“The Conference of the Birds”: The Spiritual Path and its Dangers

Using the 12th century Persian story “The Conference of the Birds” – an allegory of the mystical journey – this lecture portrays the spiritual path and its dangers, many of which also apply to the analytical process. The Swiss psychiatrist Christian Scharfetter (1936–2012) lists a range of symptoms of spiritual crises: fanaticism, narcissistic inflation, obsession, loss of control, mania, delusion, loss of reality, psychotic ego disintegration, sleeplessness, self-doubt, anxiety, depression, despair, inner emptiness, restlessness, withdrawal from society and isolation.
